

Please FCC, keep strong net neutrality rules backed by Title II. I urge the agency to keep equal internet access to all users, regardless of their internet provider. I hope that under the current administration, that net neutrality is not lost and that large providers are not going to be able to pay to keep competitors slow. Many ISPs support net neutrality and it would be a crime against them and every person on the internet if net neutrality is no longer backed by title II. Other countries have strong net neutrality rules, and the United States should lead by this example and show others that this is the way to go- equality under our law.

Brendan Dewley, high school junior.